Exploring visions of place and time: Stage 5 English

Intellectual quality: This unit asks students to explore the ways in which texts in different media represent notions of place and the cultural significance that these representations communicate. Students develop understanding of the ways in which composers use language structures and features to represent country. Students explore notions of the socially constructed nature of texts and the range of interpretations that may result as a consequence of the differing contexts of the reader. The unit asks students to analyze and evaluate representations of country and synthesise their understanding through a composition of their own. The range of texts in a variety of media is a strength of this unit as it will require students to develop the understanding of the concept of representation beyond written language.

Quality learning environment: The range and nature of the activities provide the opportunity for the development of a quality learning environment. In particular, the requirement to share responses and reflections within small groups and with the full class will establish high expectations of student performance; while the range of texts used will enable all students to find a point of entry into the unit and promote engagement. The autonomy provided to students in developing their response to the assessment task will promote student direction.

Significance: The introductory activities link the unit focus on representation to the students’ own experiences of the landscape. This is uses background knowledge to draw students into a complex examination of representation across a range of media. By beginning with activities that emphasize personal response and experience the unit provides a solid foundation for the development of higher order thinking skills.
Exploring visions of place and time

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Unit phase</th>
<th>Elements of the model of quality teaching in NSW public schools</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Intellectual quality</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Phase 1: Introduce and explain the unit and its rationale</td>
<td>Deep knowledge</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Problematic knowledge</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Higher order thinking</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Substantive communication</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Phase 2: How are visions of place and time represented in poetry?</td>
<td>Deep knowledge</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Deep understanding</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Problematic knowledge</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Substantive communication</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Phase 3: Cross Country storytelling and immersion activity</td>
<td>Deep knowledge</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Deep understanding</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Problematic knowledge</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Substantive communication</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Phase 4: Cityscape and representation</td>
<td>Deep understanding</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Problematic knowledge</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Substantive communication</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Phase 5: Exploring journeylines… the connections between research and public speaking</td>
<td>Deep knowledge</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Deep understanding</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Higher order thinking</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Substantive communication</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Phase 6: Synthesising Australian visions of place and time</td>
<td>Deep knowledge</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Deep understanding</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Higher order thinking</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Substantive communication</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Phase 7: Through the lens… developing deeper understandings about the experiences and achievements of Aboriginal people</td>
<td>Deep knowledge</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Phase 8 – Documenting, celebrating, evaluating and reflecting</td>
<td>Deep understanding</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Exploring visions of place and time: English Year 10 Stage 5

Focus areas: poetry, visual texts, nonfiction texts, media and multimedia texts
Length of unit: 7 weeks

Unit rationale:
Exploring Visions of Place and Time is a unit designed to broaden and deepen students’ skills, knowledge and cultural understanding in English, to develop their critical and imaginative faculties and to enhance their enjoyment of English as they approach the end of Stage 5. They will explore and respond to a diverse selection of texts that depict powerful experiences, set against particular places at particular times.

There is a focus in the unit on the study of poetry and visual texts, the viewing of which will be enhanced through the use of Information and Communication Technologies. ICT will also be used by students in a range of imaginative ways to track and represent their responses to texts and ideas. Students will be encouraged to draw conclusions about the role of art in cultural expression, as they move through a range of purposeful and increasingly demanding language experiences. They will begin by describing and sharing their own experiences and memories of place, opening out to a series of responding and composing activities as they are immersed in varying depictions of place. Students will experiment with the idea of visions of place and time and will re-imagine and represent throughout the unit using, for example, PowerPoint and Photo Story to make connections and to express, document and celebrate their own developing ideas and understandings of the ways in which time and place can be depicted to shape meaning.

Students will ultimately evaluate a range of texts in relation to the generative topic being studied. They will write and represent in a range of imaginative contexts and ultimately reflect on what new understandings they have gained about Aboriginal perspectives of place and time as well as what fresh insights they have developed about poetry, art, language, place and time.

Aboriginal perspectives:
Aboriginal content in this unit provides students with a range of composing and responding opportunities to develop knowledge and understanding of Aboriginal history and culture in Australia. In their study of Visions of Place and Time, students explore a range of experiences and achievements of Aboriginal people in historical and social contexts and the links between place, time, cultural expression, language and spirituality.

Many, though not all, of the texts incorporate Aboriginal perspectives of place, and there is an explicit aim in the unit to raise students’ awareness of and develop their understanding of the distinctive meaning of the term country as it relates to Aboriginal notions of place, identity, culture and belonging.

At the heart of the unit is a consideration of Cross Country (2007), a major cultural project in which 70 acclaimed Aboriginal artists were accompanied by a film crew and an oral historian on a month-long 4500 km journey along Western Australia’s Canning Stock Route. One hundred years ago, Alfred Canning surveyed the route and as drovers followed him, the fate of the Aboriginal people who were displaced has not been widely told, until now. At four camps along this journey to country Aboriginal artists record their own histories and memories via storytelling and art. The project showcases the dynamism and breadth of Aboriginal cultures and reinforces the appropriateness of art as a powerful vehicle for expressing the connections between people, place and time.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Objectives</th>
<th>Outcomes</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Through responding to and composing a wide range of texts in context and</td>
<td>1 A student responds to and composes increasingly sophisticated and sustained texts for understanding, interpretation, critical analysis and pleasure.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>through close study of texts, students will develop skills, knowledge and</td>
<td>2 A student uses and critically assesses a range of processes for responding and composing.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>understanding in order to:</td>
<td>3 A student selects, uses, describes and explains how different technologies affect and shape meaning.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• speak, listen, read, write, view and represent</td>
<td>6 A student experiments with different ways of imaginatively and interpretively transforming experience, information and ideas into texts.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>8 A student investigates the relationships between and among texts.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>10 A student questions, challenges and evaluates cultural assumptions in texts and their effects on meaning.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• think in ways that are imaginative, interpretive and critical</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• express themselves and their relationships with others and the world.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Unit overview and resources

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Phase 1: Introduce and explain the unit and its rationale</th>
<th>Photographs of settings, places, locations</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Phase 2: How are visions of place and time represented in poetry? | Emily Brontë, Spellbound
Thomas Hardy, The Self Unseeing
Felicity Plunkett’s October’s Road
Samuel Wagan Watson’s white stucco dreaming from Smoke Encrypted Whispers, 2004
Terry Anne Whitebeach’s A Child’s Story (Tasmania) from the Australian Women’s Book Review, Vol 5.1 March 1993 |
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Phase 8: Documenting, celebrating, evaluating, reflecting</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Exploring visions of place and time: Stage 5 English

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Outcomes</th>
<th>Syllabus content</th>
<th>Teaching and learning strategies</th>
<th>Evidence of learning/assessment</th>
<th>Feedback</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| 1. A student responds to and composes increasingly sophisticated and sustained texts for understanding, interpretation, critical analysis and pleasure. 2. A student uses and critically assesses a range of processes for responding and composing. 6. A student experiments with different ways of imaginatively and interpretively transforming experience, information and ideas into texts. | Students learn about: 1.11 their own emerging sense of style, personal preference and discernment in responding to and composing texts Students learn to: 2.7 identify and articulate their own processes of responding and composing 6.5 experiment with ways of representing the real world imaginatively. | Phase 1 Introduce and explain the unit and its rationale
Place photographs of evocative places on the floor around the classroom. Each student chooses a photograph. They reflect individually on the place in the photograph using a ‘see, think, wonder’ thinking routine. ‘What I see in this photograph is… It makes me think… and then I wonder…’ Students share reflections in pairs and explain why they were drawn to the photograph they chose. Whole class contributes to brainstorming: early thoughts on visions of place and time. Students bring to class an image of a place that is special to them. They write a descriptive paragraph about that place, in the context of a particular time that they remember. Pair share. Students then sit in a circle and read their paragraphs and show their images to the class. Class brainstorm: further thoughts on visions of place and time. | Students to write a brief reflection on the unit rationale: what are they looking forward to in the unit; what questions do they have about the unit.
Students’ articulation of their connection to the photograph of place: moving from pairs, to whole class, to the brainstorm leading students to contribute to a collective record of the class’s early thoughts on visions of place and time.
Descriptive writing exercise in journal and spoken explanation, connecting the chosen photograph to a writing exercise: a personal and imaginative response to the task. | Spoken feedback affirming and clarifying. Written feedback in journals
Self evaluation, peer, class and teacher spoken feedback
Spoken and written feedback |
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Outcomes</th>
<th>Syllabus content</th>
<th>Teaching and learning strategies</th>
<th>Evidence of learning/assessment</th>
<th>Feedback</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>3: A student selects, uses, describes and explains how different technologies affect and shape meaning. 6. A student experiments with different ways of imaginatively and interpretively transforming experience, information and ideas into texts. 8. A student investigates the relationships between and among texts.</td>
<td>Students learn to: 3.1 respond to and compose increasingly complex texts in different technologies considering the effects of the technology including layout and design on meaning 3.2 identify and critically evaluate the ways information, ideas and issues are shaped by and presented through technology. Students learn about: 6.7 ways in which literary and nonliterary composers transform ideas and experience into texts, including consideration of their insight, imaginative powers and verbal ingenuity 8.4 track and explain the treatment of a common theme or idea in a range of texts in different modes and media 8.5 compose texts to experiment with patterns, representations, intertextuality and appropriations</td>
<td>Phase 2 How are visions of place and time represented in poetry? A close reading and discussion of one early 19th century English poems: Spellbound (1837) by Emily Brontë (see Appendix) and one early 20th century English poem: The Self-Unseeing (1928) by Thomas Hardy. (see Appendix) Students in groups re-present these poems in multimedia form, using PowerPoint, setting them to music. Class viewing/evaluation/celebration of the works created, followed by discussion about the process of re-imagining and representing poetic depictions of place and time. Discuss the notion of landscape as metaphor; emotional landscapes; mindscapes; the past affronting the present. Do this in relation to and in response to what others have written about landscape, poetry and metaphor (eg Hirsch on Spellbound).</td>
<td>Evidence of learning through class discussion. Discussion about the poems, poetic language, visions, place, time that occurs as students collaborate to create a multimedia presentation. The PowerPoint presentations: evaluation and appreciation of the presentations and the decisions made by students about layout, font, music, background in relation to the poems and to the topic. Discussion of students’ learning processes in terms of the potential power of ICT as a creative tool in transforming, re-imagining and representing.</td>
<td>Self, peer and teacher spoken and written feedback Certificates awarded for presentations</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Outcomes</td>
<td>Syllabus content</td>
<td>Teaching and learning strategies</td>
<td>Evidence of learning/assessment</td>
<td>Feedback</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>---------------</td>
<td>---------------------</td>
<td>-------------------------------------</td>
<td>-----------------------------------</td>
<td>-------------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6. A student experiments with different ways of imaginatively and interpretively transforming experience, information and ideas into texts.</td>
<td>Students learn about: 6.9 the ways in which imaginative texts can explore universal themes and social reality 10.11 the beliefs and values systems underpinning texts from different cultures.</td>
<td>Phase 3 Cross Country storytelling and immersion activity. Tell students the story, through words, images and media texts, of Cross Country, the 2007 Canning Stock Route cultural project, in which 60 acclaimed Aboriginal artists, including Eubena Nampitjin and Clifford Brooks, youths and Elders, an oral historian and film crew, journeyed for a month, along WA’s Canning Stock Route, back to country to retell their history via stories, painting, weaving and carving.</td>
<td>Informal observation of students’ response to the story and texts about Cross Country; thoughtfulness in individual reflection time; role and nature of input in leading the class in discussing key ideas that emerge from the project; written response to the final question about ‘country’.</td>
<td>Spoken and written feedback</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9. A student demonstrates understanding of the ways texts reflect personal and public worlds.</td>
<td>Students learn to: 11.5 use individual and group processes to generate, investigate, document, clarify, refine, critically evaluate and present ideas and information drawn from books, the internet and other sources of information 9.1 respond to and compose texts that reflect their expanding worlds from the personal to the public.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10. A student questions, challenges and evaluates cultural assumptions in texts and their effects on meaning.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>11. A student uses, reflects on, assesses and adapts their individual and collaborative skills for learning with increasing independence and effectiveness.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Outcomes</td>
<td>Syllabus content</td>
<td>Teaching and learning strategies</td>
<td>Evidence of learning/ assessment</td>
<td>Feedback</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>----------</td>
<td>-----------------</td>
<td>---------------------------------</td>
<td>---------------------------------</td>
<td>----------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. A student uses and critically assesses a range of processes for responding and composing. 7. A student thinks critically and interpretively using information, ideas and increasingly complex arguments to respond to and compose texts in a range of contexts.</td>
<td>Students learn to: 2.4 combine processes of representation to create cohesive texts 7.1 ask perceptive and relevant questions, make logical predictions, draw analogies and challenge ideas and information in texts</td>
<td>Phase 4 Cityscape and representation&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;&lt;em&gt;There’s a fellow crying in Martin Place. They can’t stop him. &lt;/em&gt;&lt;br&gt;Speculate about this intriguing line from Les Murray’s poem &lt;em&gt;An Absolutely Ordinary Rainbow&lt;/em&gt; (see Appendix). Who is the fellow? Why might he be crying? Visit Les Murray’s website and listen to him read and talk about this poem. Design a class Sydney/cityscape representation of Murray’s poem, with the title &lt;em&gt;There’s a fellow crying in Martin Place. They can’t stop him. Les Murray’s poetic vision of place and time. &lt;/em&gt;</td>
<td>Imaginative nature of students’ speculation about the central image in Murray’s poem. Informal observation of students’ response to Murray’s introduction to and reading of the poem. Students’ collaborative work in visually representing the poem in relation to a poetic vision of place and time.</td>
<td>Spoken feedback. Open the classroom at this point as a Visions of Place and Time gallery. Students receive feedback from other English classes, English teachers, the Principal</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1. A student responds to and composes increasingly sophisticated and sustained texts for understanding, interpretation, critical analysis and pleasure. 2. A student uses and critically assesses a range of processes for responding and composing.</td>
<td>Students learn to: 1.1 respond to and compose a range of imaginative, factual and critical texts which are increasingly demanding in terms of their linguistic, structural, cognitive, emotional and moral complexity 2.1 produce sustained spoken and written texts in rehearsed, unrehearsed and impromptu situations Students learn about: 2.8 the ways that the processes of planning including</td>
<td>Phase 5 Exploring journey lines.. the connections between research and public speaking&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Read and discuss Jennifer Martiniello’s 2002 poem, &lt;em&gt;Emily Kngwarreye&lt;/em&gt; (see Appendix). Show images of Emily Kngwarreye’s painting series &lt;em&gt;My Country&lt;/em&gt;. Students research Emily Kngwarreye’s life and works and then complete the following imaginative task: &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;&lt;strong&gt;Individual Assessment Task 1.&lt;/strong&gt; Imagine you are the curator of a new exhibition of a collection of Emily Kngwarreye’s artworks. Write and present the speech for opening night of the exhibition. The title of your speech and of the exhibition: &lt;em&gt;Journeylines&lt;/em&gt; is taken from Martiniello’s poem.</td>
<td>Informal observation of students’ curiosity about and appreciation of the poem and the paintings. Written research path. Quality of written and spoken speech in relation to audience, purpose, context.</td>
<td>Progress written comments on research People’s Choice Award for speeches as a form of peer appraisal Formal mark and comment on the speech by teacher</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Outcomes</td>
<td>Syllabus content</td>
<td>Teaching and learning strategies</td>
<td>Evidence of learning/ assessment</td>
<td>Feedback</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>----------</td>
<td>-----------------</td>
<td>---------------------------------</td>
<td>---------------------------------</td>
<td>----------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>investigating, interviewing, selecting, recording and organising ideas, images and information can and should be modified according to specific purposes and texts</td>
<td>In the speech weave the lines from Martiniello’s poem that resonate most with you, as you seek to inform and inspire your audience to explore and appreciate the artist’s representation of country. Refer in your speech to visions of place and time. You may use the provided speeches as models or as a starting point.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Phase 6 Synthesising Australian Visions of Place and Time</td>
<td>Give students a collection of the following poems: Felicity Plunkett’s October’s Road (see Appendix). Lee Cataldi’s if you stay too long in the third world (see Appendix). Samuel Wagan Watson’s white stucco dreaming (see Appendix). Terry Anne Whitebeach’s A Child’s Story (see Appendix).</td>
<td>Quality of Foreword in relation to audience, purpose, context</td>
<td>Peer appraisal. Formal mark and written comment by teacher</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Students learn to: 1.2 respond to and compose more sustained texts in a range of contexts 1.3 analyse the effectiveness and impact of texts on responders in terms of ideas, perspective and originality. Students learn about: 1.12 how inference and figurative language can be used in complex and subtle ways.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Phase 7 Through the lens… developing deeper understandings about the experiences and achievements of Aboriginal people</td>
<td>Students’ response to discussion about recurring ideas which emerge in the documentary and</td>
<td>Spoken feedback</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Processes of representation including use of symbols, images, icons, stereotypes,</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Aboriginal Perspectives Across the Curriculum: English 7–10
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Outcomes</th>
<th>Syllabus content</th>
<th>Teaching and learning strategies</th>
<th>Evidence of learning/assessment</th>
<th>Feedback</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>composing.</td>
<td>connotations, inference, and particular visual and aural techniques including those of camera, design and sound, to create cohesive texts 6.8 ways in which filmmakers transform concepts into film, including consideration of script, story lines, sustained perspective, and visual and aural components of filmmaking and their interaction 10.7 the language used to express contemporary cultural issues Students learn to: 10.4 engage with details of texts to respond and compose from a range of social and critical perspectives</td>
<td>View Leah Purcell’s 2001 documentary Black Chicks Talking. Discuss issues raised that have been discussed through the unit, as they emerge in Purcell’s film: place, time, country, language, memory, culture, pride, belonging, identity, community. Invite a local Aboriginal artist, writer, poet or performer into your school (see protocols page), with the aim of giving the students a rich, personal insight into and appreciation of the ways in which this particular artist expresses their experiences of country through their chosen artistic medium.</td>
<td>from the guest’s work and story.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

View Leah Purcell’s 2001 documentary Black Chicks Talking. Discuss issues raised that have been discussed through the unit, as they emerge in Purcell’s film: place, time, country, language, memory, culture, pride, belonging, identity, community.

Invite a local Aboriginal artist, writer, poet or performer into your school (see protocols page), with the aim of giving the students a rich, personal insight into and appreciation of the ways in which this particular artist expresses their experiences of country through their chosen artistic medium.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Outcomes</th>
<th>Syllabus content</th>
<th>Teaching and learning strategies</th>
<th>Evidence of learning/assessment</th>
<th>Feedback</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| 2. A student uses and critically assesses a range of processes for responding and composing. | Students learn to: 2.6 evaluate their own and others’ texts in terms of creativity, originality, beauty and insight 3.2 identify and critically evaluate the ways information, ideas and issues are shaped by and presented through technology 8.4 track and explain the treatment of a common theme or idea in a range of texts in different modes and media | Phase 8 Documenting, celebrating, evaluating and reflecting
Collaborative Assessment
Task 3 Now that we are at the end of the unit, in groups, create a photostory, documenting your developing thoughts, ideas and understandings about visions of place and time. Include favourite lines and images that we have explored. Class viewing/evaluation/celebration.
Individual written reflection: Reflect on what you have learned and what you have come to understand during the unit. Spend 20 minutes responding to the ideas below:
Before we began studying visions of place and time, I used to think... And now I think...
| Collaborative response to task – process and product, evaluation, appreciation when viewing the photo stories. | Written reflection on individual learning and understanding. Final discussion and evaluation of the unit. |
| 3: A student selects, uses, describes and explains how different technologies affect and shape meaning. | Students learn about: 11.16 ways in which reflection and self-evaluation can assist learning. |                                                                                                                 |                                                                                              | Individual, peer and teacher feedback on photo stories in written and spoken form. |
| 8. A student investigates the relationships between and among texts. |                                                                                   |                                                                                                                 |                                                                                              | Presentation of photo stories to other classes, to the English Department and on the school’s intranet and website |
| 11. A student uses, reflects on, assesses and adapts their individual and collaborative skills for learning with increasing independence and effectiveness. |                                                                                   |                                                                                                                 |                                                                                              | Final individual and teacher written feedback in journals. |
List of main assessment tasks

Individual Assessment

Description of Task 1: Imagine you are the curator of a new exhibition of a collection of Emily Kngwarreye’s artworks. Write and present the speech for opening night of the exhibition. The title of your speech and of the exhibition: Journeylines is taken from Martiniello’s poem. In the speech weave the lines from Martiniello’s poem that resonate most with you, as you seek to inform and inspire your audience to explore and appreciate the artist’s representation of country. Refer in your speech to visions of place and time. You may use the provided speeches as models or as a starting point.

Individual Assessment

Description of Task 2: Imagine that you have been asked to write a one-page foreword to a new poetry anthology titled Australian Visions of Place and Time. Write the foreword. Refer to aspects of at least three of these poems in terms of how the reader may come to appreciate the way these poets explore and express distinctive emotions in the context of particular places and at particular times.

Collaborative Assessment

Description of Task 3: Now that we are at the end of the unit, in groups, create a photostory, documenting your developing thoughts, ideas and understandings about visions of place and time. Include favourite lines and images that we have explored. Class viewing/evaluation/celebration.
Appendix – The Poems

Spellbound

The night is darkening round me,
The wild winds coldly blow;
But a tyrant spell has bound me,
And I cannot, cannot go.

The giant trees are bending
Their bare boughs weighed with snow;
The storm is fast descending,
And yet I cannot go.

Clouds beyond clouds above me,
Wastes beyond wastes below;
But nothing drear can move me:
I will not, cannot go.

Emily Brontë
The Self-unseeing

Here is the ancient floor,
Footworn and hollowed and thin,
Here was the former door
Where the dead feet walked in.

She sat here in her chair,
Smiling into the fire;
He who played stood there,
Bowing it higher and higher.

Childlike, I danced in a dream;
Blessings emblazoned that day;
Everything glowed with a gleam;
Yet we were looking away!

Thomas Hardy
An Absolutely Ordinary Rainbow

The word goes round Repins,
the murmur goes round Lorenzinis,
at Tattersalls, men look up from sheets of numbers,
the Stock Exchange scribblers forget the chalk in their hands and men with bread in their pockets leave the Greek Club:
There's a fellow crying in Martin Place. They can't stop him.

The traffic in George Street is banked up for half a mile and drained of motion. The crowds are edgy with talk and more crowds come hurrying. Many run in the back streets which minutes ago were busy main streets, pointing:
There's a fellow weeping down there. No one can stop him.

The man we surround, the man no one approaches simply weeps, and does not cover it, weeps not like a child, not like the wind, like a man and does not declaim it, nor beat his breast, nor even sob very loudly—yet the dignity of his weeping holds us back from his space, the hollow he makes about him in the midday light, in his pentagram of sorrow, and uniforms back in the crowd who tried to seize him stare out at him, and feel, with amazement, their minds longing for tears as children for a rainbow.

Some will say, in the years to come, a halo or force stood around him. There is no such thing.
Some will say they were shocked and would have stopped him but they will not have been there. The fiercest manhood, the toughest reserve, the slickest wit amongst us trembles with silence, and burns with unexpected judgements of peace. Some in the concourse scream who thought themselves happy. Only the smallest children and such as look out of Paradise come near him and sit at his feet, with dogs and dusty pigeons.

Ridiculous, says a man near me, and stops his mouth with his hands, as if it uttered vomit—and I see a woman, shining, stretch her hand and shake as she receives the gift of weeping;
as many as follow her also receive it and many weep for sheer acceptance, and more refuse to weep for fear of all acceptance, but the weeping man, like the earth, requires nothing,

the man who weeps ignores us, and cries out of his writhen face and ordinary body not words, but grief, not messages, but sorrow, hard as the earth, sheer, present as the sea—
and when he stops, he simply walks between us mopping his face with the dignity of one man who has wept, and now has finished weeping.

Evading believers, he hurries off down Pitt Street.

Les Murray
Emily Kngwarreye

your face
is the grace a harsh life bestows on its survivors, each crease
a bar whose notes, escaping their dirge, rung for the high octaves like a bird to a joyous freedom once the doors of the cage are broken deep-coloured as the millennia sediments that scar the cliff faces of sacred country your face is as ancient a bed to flowing water carving its agelessness into the land the way wisdom enscripts its elusive dance upon humanity

and I watch you slowly measuring out the journeylines with a finger brushed with red earth and hear the dust that others only see as a place to put their boots open its voice and speak, see your hand on the cave walls where they have held the ochred spirit in the rock for all eternity, and watch how the sun shifts to accommodate your shadow, effortlessly, day after day without tiring

I watch you bend your face to greet the waterhole, see how your laughter is caught up in the transient ripples and released without possessive grasping to share you with reed, tree,— how you and it are the same manna
born in the same creation

I see… beyond the verticals and horizontals of skin the hundred boys who’ve died in custody and whom you’ve mourned, the warp and weft of sorrow in you face for all the young women whose eyes do not know their country or their mothers but whose children still belong to your body – how your skin carefully recorded story, mother, son, daughter, place and time – the same way your smile stretches other boundaries

sometimes beyond comprehension and lesser visions restrained to the finite byte of desert stopover, campfire talk, a desperate camera – clutch at a surreal otherworld that fail to distinguish how you rise from earth, become Exploring visions of place and time: Stage 5 English ancestor, mother, daughter, grandmother, granddaughter, terrain, sacred physicality – fail to see how the one spirit makes you blood and rock, well and water

your face wears the intaglio of embattled anguish, betrayal, theft, deceit, massacre and grief survived – and when I remember the zealot piety and passion of ANZAC, two world wars, Korea, Vietnam,
I remember also that you witnessed all of them for nine generations and more; and as I watch you bend to trace creation in red earth with a finger more purposeful than Michelangelo’s Sistine god’s
I see a light more eternal kindle in those you teach,
See each other, mirror-like, reflect the tireless radiance
Of an inevitable grace

Jennifer Martiniello
October’s Road

We slid down October’s road to find the first days of spring.
In Newcastle you and I stayed at the hotel that gazes at the beach.
You toddled, shrieked, pulled towards the sea,
shook shells to unrattle their secrets.
Something about your small sandals in my hand
cought childhood for me: I was a child again.
Slow late afternoon rays raked stripes on the coldening sand:
grey, gold, grey: like lines drawn by giant fingers.
All day the thought came back, moving in my mind the way a sleeper turns:
something is ending.
Yet there I was with you, still a miracle to me. And with me, too, your unborn sister who would wake to a morning fresh with death.
My father was to meet us at the freeway’s end as he had a year ago, and in the years before.
He liked to share the driving, to make the gesture of meeting us.
But now this generosity was too heavy: trains’ roars, traffic, speed:
the trip’s jolts would be unbearable.
Every journey now, he had eyes’ coins cold in his palm, ready.
That last short segment of road was straight with loneliness.
It spelt the start of driving without a compass, of being at the front.
And giant fingers were at play here too:
clumsily arranging cars on the road, as though through blurred eyes, unveiling the certainty of death in glimpses, real and unreal like the face of an unborn child, making all the lines of a neat life wavy, strange, grainy.

Felicity Plunkett

Note: October’s Road, with another poem (Inside Your Wardrobe) won a $US5000 prize in the Dorothy Sargent Rosenberg Poetry Prizes, funded within the Dorothy Sargent Rosenberg Memorial Fund, which offers a poetry contest to award prizes to ‘young poets with unusual promise’. Felicity Plunkett’s poetry has been published widely in journals and anthologies including HEAT, Southerly, Blue Dog, The Literary Review (US) and Calyx: Thirty Contemporary Australian Poets, ed. Michael Brennan and Peter Minter (Paperbark Press, 2000).
If you stay too long in the third world
you learn to hawk and spit like an old woman you become unfit for dinner parties in the lands of the well fed having dropped out of your original country into this space from which the coast with its oceans and gardens

the party on the terrace the splash of green water over the bow of the yacht are images projected on a screen whose unreality you resent the other side of the coin whose gain is the loss you see all around

if you stay too long in the third world
death becomes a fact of life  the old die quickly  the young can’t count on being old  this termite death hollows out the roots of endeavour as children leave toys you abandon your previous explanations

if you stay too long in the third world
it will fill the space in your psyche with a different discourse you will begin to recognise the unfamiliar in the unfamiliar the outline of a landscape in a pattern of dots

the faces of relations in the tragic and violent repetitions of a song  the patterns of daily living in the holy steps of a dance

if you stay too long in the third world
you will become accustomed to silence and observation leading to understanding to abundance and malnutrition immutably hand in hand

when the eager and rational voice whose creature you are whose instrument you had volunteered to become grates like the radio on a bad day you switch it off

if you stay too long in the third world
you will be unable to leave

Lee Cataldi
white stucco dreaming

sprinkled in the happy dark of my mind is early childhood and black humour
white stucco dreaming
and a black Labrador an orange and black panel-van called ‘black banana’
with twenty blackfellas hanging out the back blasting through the white stucco umbilical of a working class tribe front yards studded with old black tires that became mutant swans overnight attacked with a cane knife and a bad white paint job

white stucco dreaming
and snakes that morphed into nylon hoses at the terror of Mum’s scorn
snakes whose cool venom we sprayed onto the white stucco, temporarily blushing it pink amid and atmosphere of Saturday morning grass cuttings and flirtatious melodies of ice-cream trucks that echoed through little black minds and sent the Labrador insane chocolate hand prints like dreamtime fraud laid across white stucco and mud cakes on the camp stove that just made Dad see black no tree safe from treehouse sprawl and the police cars that crawled up and down the back streets, peering into our white stucco cocoon

wishing they were with us

Samuel Wagan Watson

---

A Child’s Story
(Tasmania)

1.
The We-Who-Are-Not-Here have always lived here
among the casuarinas, out in the surf, behind the tussocky cutting grass-they are my secret.

I hear them calling in their shrill bird voices feel their quick light footsteps as they pad beside me through the sand dunes at arm’s length

no closer no further they share the beach with me.
Sometimes I screw my eyes up tightly, lie still then sit up suddenly, hoping to see them clearly but they are always too quick, too shy, and I too sun-dazzled to gather more than the flash of a retreating back, or an upturned foot, running.

And when I shout to them to wait for me my only answer is the sound of seagulls laughing overhead and the soft suck of crabs on the tideline.

2.
No one spoke of them to me and so I learned to keep silence. I knew there were secrets that were shared yet never spoken – like breathing or people who died – there was nothing to say.

And as I learned the mystery the We-Who-Are-Not-Here began to trust me and come closer the children dancing in the foam and holding out their hands to me and their mothers offering pipis and tasty roots to chew. And when at last the old women spoke sang songs about journeys they had taken

I was never sure that it was not the wind’s bluster nor the surf’s low boom that I mistook for words

nor did I care as I ran with the wind behind me, salt-sprayed, among my friends, beside the sea.

A Child’s Story When I was young we had a shack at Carlton Beach in south-eastern. Tasmania. I spent days and weeks wandering among the middens with the ‘silent ones’ as I called them. I did not know they were the spirits of dead [Aboriginal people] until one day my sister told me that all the Tasmanian Aborigines had been killed. I learned later that this was not true, but at the time I was devastated. The silent ones disappeared, and did not come back to me till I was 37 years old.

Terry Anne Whitebeach